Abstract

Where did archaeology go in the process towards a new Museums Act?

The article briefly summarizes the process towards a reform of the present Museums Act. The result of the process was presented by the Minister of Culture in May 2024 and is expected to take effect on 1 January 2025.

The focus of this paper is particularly on why, despite all good intentions, the museums' many different professional tasks – including archaeology – were not given any importance in the audit?
